Lt. Col. George Schank
Texas Wing
Inspector General

The Civil Air Patrol Inspector General System is an independent and objective program that:

- Reviews units for compliance with CAP Regulations and operating practices; and reports the findings to the commander.
- Receives and investigates complaints and assists members in mediating disputes and resolving membership issues.
- Educates Civil Air Patrol commanders and members regarding the privileges of and protection for those contacting an inspector general.
- Trains inspector general staff members, and investigating officers to conduct thorough, unbiased investigations and inspections based on fair and objective fact-finding.

Specific, detailed guidance on the CAP IG program may be found in CAPR 123-1.

CAPR 123-2 tells you how to file a complaint with the Inspector General. You may go to the Inspector General at any level; however, experience has shown that commanders and supervisors can best resolve most problems. For this reason, although not required, you are encouraged to discuss your problem with your supervisor or commander, if possible, before contacting the IG.
